Care of Honey-Makers Extremely Fas cinating to Many People and Returns Substantial Profit.

(By E. P. PHILLIPS.) Beekeeping is extremely fascinating to the majority of people as a pastime, furnishing outdoor exercise as well as intimacy with an insect whose activity advantage of being a recreation which pays its own way and often produces no mean profit.

The location of the hives is a matter considerable importance. As a rule it is better for hives to face away from the prevailing wind and be protected from high winds. In the north, a south slope is desirable. It is advisable for hives to be so placed that the sun will strike them early in the morning, so that the bees become active early in the day, and thus gain an advantage by getting the first supply of nectar. It is also advantageous to have the hives shaded during the hottest part of the day, so that the bees will not hang out in front of the hive instead of working. They should be so placed that the bees will not prove a nuisance to passers-by or disturb live stock. This latter precaution may save the beekeeper considerable gerous, especially to horses.

The plot on which the hives are placed should be kept free from weeds, especially in front of the entrances. The grass may be cut with a lawn mower, but it will often be found more convenient and as efficient to pasture one or more head of sheep in the apiary inclosure. The hives should be far enough apart to permit of free manipulation. If hives are too close together there is danger of bees entering the wrong hive on returning.

These conditions, which may be considered as ideal, need not all be followed. When necessary bees may be kept on house tops, in the back part of city lots, in the woods, or in many other places where the ideal conditions are not found. As a matter of fact, few apiarles are perfectly located; nevertheless the location should be carefully planned, especially when a large number of colonies are kept primarily for profit.

GOOD MANAGEMENT OF COWS

Best Season for Animals to Come Fresh Is Autumn-Calves Are Then Easier to Raise.

Major Henry E. Alvord, in the Iowa Homestead, says: "If the prime object is to produce the greatest quantity of milk of the best quality and at the greatest profit from any giver number of cows within a year, the evidence is overwhelming that the cows should be managed so as to calve in the autumn months. For like reasons September is the best month in most parts of the country for a helfer to drop her first calf in order to best develop as a cow, and this almost regardless of the age of the animal at first calving. Calves born in the fall are easier reared and make better cows than those born in the spring or summer. It seems needless to rehearse the stock arguments on this subject, based upon the long experience of successful dairymen, but a brief recapitulation may be useful. The cow or helfer calving in the fall needs the most healthy and nutritious pasture first following the strain and while coming into full flow. Just at the time when some falling off is likely to occur, the animal is brought to the stable and receives good care. The winter feeding and the returns from it may be depended upon to exceed the mid-summer results for a like period. At the stage of milking and of gestation, when another dropping off in the milk yield may be looked for, the fresh pasturage induces a fresh flow, lengthens the milking season and increases the product. December and January are good months in which to control and supervise the service of the bull."

Points of a Dairy Cow.

The cow is a machine to convert food into milk. Thus she must have a large middle and strong constitution to insure best results. She must also have a large udder, large milk wells, large crooked milk veins and good sized tests. Her head should be leam and angular in appearance, with the eyes standing out prominently. The neck should be rather long and clean in appearance, the shoulders pointed and the backbone rather prominent. The skin should be loose and soft to the touch.
